

Intercultural Feuilleton - Today from Rome

15. Oktober 2020 12:01

Miriam Hanke

Leopold Lorenzoni

Erschienen in den Kategorien:

Corona

With this blog post, we want to give people from around the world and from different backgrounds the opportunity to tell their personal stories in times of the Corona pandemic. Today with a report from the "eternal city" of Rome. In the beginning, when the disease started to spread, the city was severely affected by the pandemic, resulting in a strict lockdown and strict curfews. Marlis Malignino describes this situation as one that took a lot of getting used to and tells how she was cheered up by little funny stories and images from her friends during this difficult and lonely time. Nora Hanke translates her answers from Italian to English. Listen to Marlis' story here:

Your browser does not support the audio element.

Why this project?

Because the Corona pandemic has now reached all the countries of the world and is impacting the lives of the majority of the world's population, we, two students of Cusanus University, are interested in learning about people in other places of the world beyond what the media has covered. The aim is to enter into a socially relevant dialogue at the interface between academic scholarship and society, and to authentically provide different perspectives. With this goal in mind, we want to ask people from different regions of the world to offer their own interpretations, their own narratives of the current situation. The blog posts are displayed in alphabetical order of regions, countries and cities. Note: The information provided here represents the individual opinions and individual experiences of those persons interviewed.

#coronaverstehen

coronaverstehen.de