Today with a post from Väsby. Upplands Väsby is located 30 km northwest of Stockholm, the capital of Sweden. Karin talks about her experiences during the pandemic and how the Swedish government is dealing with the infection situation. Sweden relies mainly on each individual's personal responsibility and does not make any collective decisions on health protection. Karin also reports on the changes in her daily work in the area of integration. Her main difficulty revolves around coping with online work in a field that normally relies on direct interaction. Listen to the post here. Have fun!

Why this project?

Because the Corona pandemic has now reached all the countries of the world and is impacting the lives of the majority of the world's population, we, two students of Cusanus University, are interested in learning about people in other places of the world beyond what the media has covered. The aim is to enter into a socially relevant dialogue at the interface between academic scholarship and society, and to authentically provide different perspectives. With this goal in mind, we want to ask people from different regions of the world to offer their own interpretations, their own narratives of the current situation. The blog posts are displayed in alphabetical order of regions, countries and cities. Note: The information provided here represents the individual opinions and individual experiences of those persons interviewed.
